

Dr. Ashlyn Schwartz, PhD

Public Health Scientist • Keynote Speaker • Author

Your nervous system is your most important leadership tool.

Dr. Ashlyn Schwartz makes the neuroscience of stress simple, personal, and actionable. With a PhD in Public Health Sciences, a Fulbright Research Scholarship, and over a decade studying trauma, addiction, and nervous system regulation, she brings academic depth to stages — then makes it land in the body, not just the mind.

Her keynotes aren't lectures. They're experiences. Audiences don't just leave inspired — they leave with practical tools they can use that day.

The Story Behind the Work

Ashlyn's journey into nervous system leadership began with loss. At 23, her brother's death to an opioid overdose shifted her entire career — from kinesiology to public health, to trauma and stress research. For twelve years she built toward her dream position at one of Ireland's top universities, until she realized the chronic stress was destroying her health.

Then she moved to France. For three years, she experienced a fundamentally different relationship with stress and productivity — more creative, more productive, healthier. The proof that it doesn't have to be the way it is. She walked away from her dream job — not to escape, but because she now knew, from lived experience, that the cost of chronic stress isn't worth any title. That clarity became her mission: to help people get out of reactivity and into aligned action.

Keynote Topics

Nervous System Leadership: Regulate First, Respond Second

The neuroscience of why high-performing people become reactive under pressure — and the real-time tools to shift from survival mode to grounded leadership. Audiences experience regulation techniques live and leave with a framework for their next meeting.

From Reactive to Regulated: The Science of Sustainable Leadership

Why traditional leadership training fails when stress hits — and what the research says actually works. Ashlyn bridges Western neuroscience with Eastern somatic practices to help leaders stay calm, clear, and connected under pressure.

SIGNATURE TALK

It Doesn't Have to Be the Way It Is Part personal story, part neuroscience, part collective wake-up call. From losing her brother to walking away from her dream job — an experience that gives audiences permission to question whether the way they're working is actually working.

Psychological Safety Starts with Nervous System Safety

Why policies and good intentions aren't enough to create psychologically safe workplaces. How trauma patterns show up in team dynamics — and what organizations can do, starting at the nervous system level, to build cultures where people perform because they feel safe.

Credentials

- PhD, Public Health Sciences
- Fulbright Research Scholar
- 50+ Speaking Engagements
- Published Author & Poet
- Certified Yoga & Breathwork Practitioner
- Creator of the RRR Framework
- Founder, The Collective Om

Format & Investment

FORMAT	DURATION	INVESTMENT
Keynote Presentation	45–60 minutes	$3,500
Extended Keynote + Q&A	75–90 minutes	$3,500
Half-Day Workshop (interactive)	3 hours	Custom quote

Includes: Pre-event planning call, customized content for your audience, slide deck, and participant takeaway guide. Available: In-person (nationwide) or virtual.

What Audiences Say

- "Dr. Schwartz has an amazing way of blending science-based research with mindfulness practices."

— Research Conference Attendee
- "She blends her depth of knowledge of the brain and body from western academia with embodied practices from eastern arts. As a therapist myself, I highly recommend her work."

— Licensed Therapist
- "Dr. Ashlyn's talk was super informative and provided great activities to practically apply in my daily life!"

— Research Conference Attendee

Ideal For

- Corporate leadership conferences & retreats
- HR & L&D professional development
- Healthcare & wellness conferences
- Women's leadership summits
- Mental Health & Stress Awareness Month
- Employee appreciation & team events

Book Ashlyn

Keynote availability is limited. Contact to check dates and discuss customization for your event.

Ashlyn Schwartz, PhD

ashlyn@thecollectiveom.com

(678) 447-3930

www.thecollectiveom.com